Council passes IG bill in heated vote

City Council. The bill establishes the creation of an NYPD Inspector General.

In a late-night session that stretched into the small hours of Thursday morning, the City Council approved two controversial bills mandating an inspector general to oversee the NYPD and a stringent ban on bias-based profiling. Both passed with a veto-proof majority.

"If you have never been black, Muslim or Asian in the city of New York, please listen to us," Councilman Jumaane Williams said in an impassioned speech before the vote.

The IG bill found its veto-proof majority long before the anti-profiling bill did.

Around 2:20 a.m., Councilman Brad Lander announced Councilman Ruben Wills was the necessary 34th vote on the profiling bill.

Though she voted against the profiling bill and for the inspector general bill, Council Speaker Christine Quinn insisted she does "not share concerns that [the profiling bill] will make the city less safe."

Mayor's response

- Mayor Michael Bloomberg released a statement almost immediately. He noted the record lows in murders and shootings, and said this year is on track to break those records.

- He vowed to veto the bills "and continue to make our case to councilmembers over the coming days and weeks."

In opposition

"Unfortunately, these dangerous pieces of legislation will only hurt our police officers' ability to protect New Yorkers and sustain this tremendous record of accomplishment."

Councilman rocks out at benefit for after-school programs

I.S. 318, a middle school in Williamsburg, hosted a benefit concert recently at Brooklyn Bowl to save its after-school programs after the city announced plans to cut funding, the Greenpoint Star reported.

The concert, featuring students, bands and even a few City Council members, was considered a success, but it was an agreement between the mayor and City Council afterwards that really helped the programs at I.S. 318 survive this round of cuts.

"The budget agreement that we reached with the mayor will ensure that no cuts will occur to I.S. 318 after-school programs," Councilman Stephen Levin, who performed in a band at the benefit, said. "We are hopeful that we can still gain back even more slots."

Alligator parts are found in Williamsburg

Williamsburg residents received quite a surprise on Wednesday, when the scattered limbs of an alligator were found strewn along North 10th Street, the Daily News reports.

The weird discovery only contained the rotting, fly-ridden limbs of the animal; other body parts were nowhere to be found, and it's leaving many puzzled about why the legs were left in the neighborhood.

"Maybe he ate the rest of it and didn't like the leg," Ricardo Rodrigo told the News. BREANNA BISHOP

Election. Three-way tie for mayor in latest poll to be released

It once looked like the other candidates didn't stand a chance against City Council Speaker Christine Quinn in this year's mayoral race. Now, a new Quinnipiac University poll shows that Quinn, Anthony Weiner and former Comptroller Bill Thompson are in a three-way tie to be the front-runner.

According to a new poll, Quinn has 19 percent of voter support, Weiner has 17 percent and Thompson has 16 percent. Public Advocate Bill de Blasio and Comptroller John Liu trail with 10 percent and 7 percent of the vote, respectively.

Council overrides veto of sick leave bill

Health. New York City becomes the largest in the country for paid sick leave.

The City Council overrode Mayor Michael Bloomberg's veto of the paid sick leave bill Thursday, June 27, passing the law that affects more than 1 million workers in the city.

Companies with 20 or more employees will be required to offer five paid sick days beginning April 1, 2014. It will expand to include companies with 15 or more workers on Oct. 1, 2015. Businesses with fewer than 15 employees will have to provide unpaid sick days.

The new bill will go into effect in April 2014. / WILLIAM ALATRISTE

All businesses are prohibited from firing employees for taking time off when they are sick.

Other cities, such as San Francisco, already have legislation requiring employers to provide paid sick days. New York is the largest city to require sick paid leave.

Christine Quinn had blocked a vote on the bill, saying the city's economy was too fragile. Under pressure, she brought the bill to the floor and Bloomberg vetoed it.

Businesses will have to cut costs other ways, which will hurt employees, the mayor has argued.

DOMA. Edie Windsor endorses Christine Quinn in mayoral race

On the same day that the Supreme Court rejected the Defense of Marriage Act, Edie Windsor announced she is endorsing Christine Quinn in the New York City mayoral race.

Windsor, the plaintiff in the case, made the announcement Wednesday, June 26, at a West Village rally at the Stonewall Inn to celebrate the decision.

Quinn took the stage and prepared to speak to the ecstatic crowd when she was interrupted by Windsor.

"I just want to say one thing: I was committed to not endorse anyone until there was a decision," Windsor said. Hugging the speaker, she then declared, "Christine Quinn!"

Windsor later told The Wall Street Journal that her announcement "definitely" amounts to an official endorsement of Christine Quinn for New York mayor.

Edie Windsor / BESS ADLER

Windsor sued the government after her spouse, Thea Spyer, died in 2009. Spyer's death left Windsor with a steep federal estate-tax bill because the federal government did not recognize their same-sex marriage. Windsor will now get that money back—with interest, her lawyer, Roberta Kaplan, said. LAURA SHIN

NYPD. Another Bronx teacher charged with raping young student Another Bronx public school teacher has been arrested and charged with raping a student in his care, police reported.

Brian Kearins, 33, a music teacher at Herbert H. Lehman High School, was allegedly having sex with his 16-year-old student.

The alleged crime came to light when the girl's older sister, snooping in her little sister's email account, found a message to their male cousin in which the younger sister said she had sex with one of her teachers, police said.

The Bronx Special Victims Squad arrested Kearins at his home and Kearins reportedly denied having sexual contact with his student. Police said his answers were vague, and he requested a lawyer about 40 minutes into the questioning.

ARE YOU PEEKING, UNCLE SAM?

Like many of you, I was uneasy when I first learned about this whole domestic surveillance scheme. Every time I heard a click on the phone I would shout, "Axelrod? Is that you?" The other night, I noticed a car lurking behind mine, so I rolled down my window, leaned out, and screamed, "Why are you following me?" I'm pretty sure that guy was a spy, because his eyes grew wide and he raced right out of the drive-through line without even picking up his food.

But now that I have thought it over, I'm beginning to see potential advantages to having the government record my electronic life. For starters, a friend emailed a fantastic recipe for bread pudding to me that I have completely lost. What better way to find it than with a quick call? "Hello, is this the NSA? Did you notice anything in my file that has the word 'cinnamon'?"

A couple of years ago, I dropped my cellphone into a puddle and then ran over it with my car. Don't ask. The people at the phone store, once they stopped giggling, told me there was no way to recover the contacts, but who knows what the helpful folks at the FBI might be able to do?

The possibilities are endless. I could recover that long lost digital photo of my dog looking exactly like Ashton Kutcher, or they could help me locate that YouTube clip of the Bolivian ventriloquist, and if the IRS ever wants to audit my taxes, I'll just say, "Call the CIA. They already have my records!"

Maybe we should expand the program. The U.S. intelligence community seems perfectly happy to be a ginormous, free cloud storage system, and having someone else keep track of everything we say, write or photograph could benefit us all. Well, maybe not Paula Deen and Anthony Weiner, but still.

And if the only trade out is that I find Biden lurking in my bushes now and then, I can live with that.

Senate passes reform bill

The Senate approved a landmark immigration bill on Thursday that would provide millions of undocumented immigrants a chance to become citizens, but the leader of the House of Representatives said the measure was dead on arrival in the House.

In a rare show of bipartisanship, the Democratic-controlled Senate passed the bill by a vote of 68-32, with 14 of the Senate's 46 Republicans joining all 52 Democrats and two independents in support of the bill.

A packed gallery of supporters, who have labored decades for such a moment, witnessed the vote, which came after three weeks of sometimes heated debate.

They were fully aware that hours before the vote, House Speaker John Boehner reiterated that Republicans would "do our own bill," one that "reflects the will of our majority," many of whom oppose citizenship for immigrants who are in the United States illegally.

While a combined vote of House Democrats and Republicans could conceivably team up to pass the measure, Boehner repeated that he would not allow consideration of any measure that does not have the support of most of the House's 234 Republicans. REUTERS

Supreme Court declines to take up two more gay rights cases

A day after deciding two major cases on gay marriage, The U.S. Supreme Court declined on June 27 to take up two cases on the issue of gay rights.

The cases concerned Nevada's ban on same-sex marriage and an Arizona law that denies state benefits to domestic partners.

The court, which rejects the vast majority of cases that come before it, declined to hear the cases without comment.

The action means an appeals court ruling striking down the Arizona law stays in effect, while litigation over the Nevada law will continue. REUTERS

Medicaid

Medicaid covers more than 62 million Americans, according to the Kaiser Family Foundation.

Health. The Affordable Care Act establishes exchanges so people can explore all their health coverage options in one place.

The Supreme Court's ruling that same-sex couples are eligible for federal benefits will mean more gays and lesbians can reap the benefits of President Obama's health care overhaul that take effect January 1, advocates say.

The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act already bans discrimination in health coverage based on sexual orientation or gender identity. The law, known as "Obamacare," was passed in 2010 and upheld by the Supreme Court.

With the Supreme Court decision, same-sex couples who live in states that recognize them can apply for the law's tax subsidies, meant to offset health care costs, as a couple rather than as two individuals, said Tim Jost, a health law expert and law professor at Washington and Lee University. This will help the law reach more people, he added.

Some couples will be newly eligible for spousal protections under Medicaid, a federally funded program that provides care to low-income parents, children, seniors and people with disabilities.

If couples decide to file taxes jointly, they may no longer qualify for Medicaid or tax credits because their combined income may be above the eligibility level.

US suspending trade benefits for Bangladesh

The United States is suspending longtime trade benefits for Bangladesh until the country makes progress on poor workers' safety conditions that have cost more than 1,200 lives in the garment sector in the past year, the White House said.

Espionage. Obama not willing to make deals to get Snowden

President Obama said he would not start “wheeling and dealing” with China and Russia over a U.S. request to extradite former American spy agency contractor Edward Snowden.

Obama also dismissed suggestions the United States might try to intercept Snowden if he were allowed to depart Moscow by air.

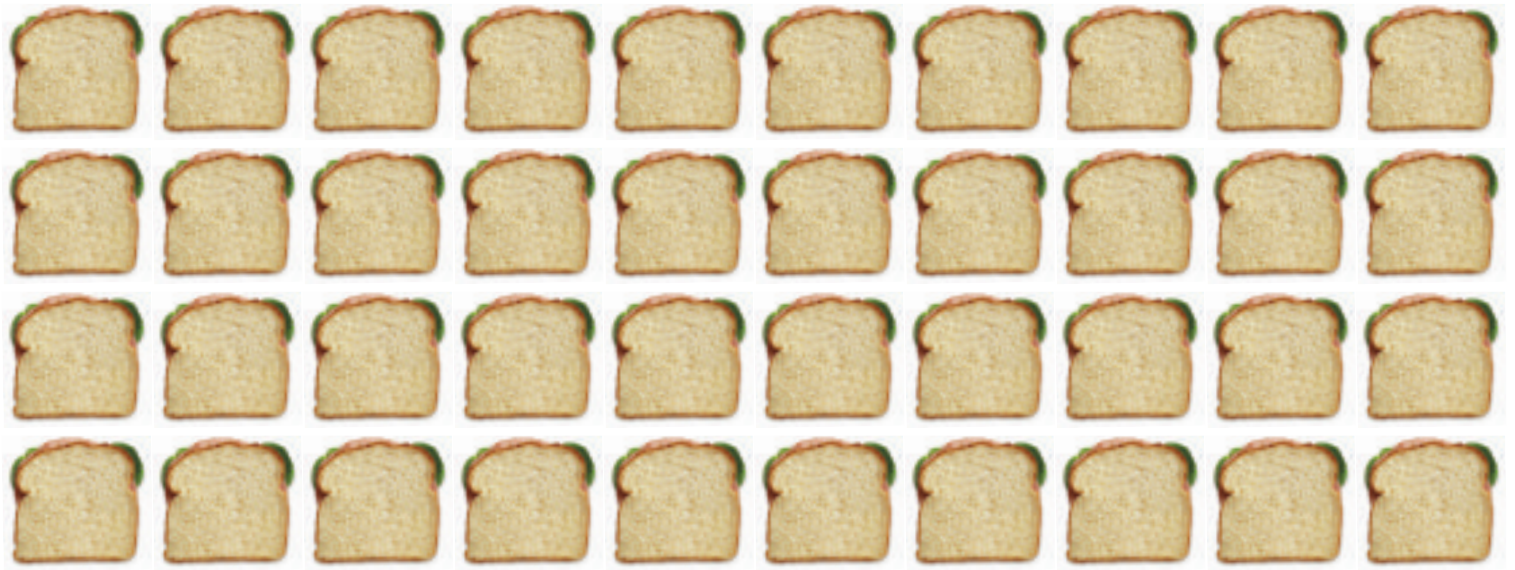

"No, I'm not going to be scrambling jets to get a 29-year-old hacker," he told a news conference in Dakar. Snowden turned 30 last week.

Obama said regular legal channels should suffice to handle the request that Snowden, who left Hong Kong for Moscow, be returned.

Obama said he had not yet spoken to Chinese President Xi Jinping or Russian President Vladimir Putin on the issue. REUTERS

Sneak attack pioneer

Girl Talk industry talk

This sneak attack approach isn't exactly brand new. Mash-up artist Gregg Gillis built up a big word-of-mouth following with the 2006 Girl Talk album, "Night Ripper." For the two Girl Talk albums that followed — 2008's "Feed the Animals" and 2010's "All Day" — he just quietly leaked them online and watched the reaction spread across the worldwide web like wildfire.

"Everyone gets to hear it at the same time, before reading any reviews or forming any opinions," says Gillis. "I think it's worked out great for me in the past, but for future releases, I have been actively thinking about giving it some short advance notice. Doing it in a strategic way can be helpful for giving it proper context."

So does that mean we can expect a new sneak attack from Girl Talk soon? If we told you, it wouldn't really be a sneak attack, would it?

The new blueprint for big album releases

Trend. David Bowie, Boards of Canada, Daft Punk, Kanye West and now Jay-Z are revolutionizing the way musicians release their work. It's called the sneak attack!

When Jay-Z put out "The Blueprint 3" in September 2009, most of his fans had known about its arrival for the better part of a year. And in the months leading up to the release, the rapper gradually shared the title, track list, artwork and names of guests to slowly and steadily amp up expectations for the release.

Four years later and Jay-Z is using a totally different blueprint. Earlier this month, during the fifth game of the NBA Finals, he appeared in a commercial promoting "Magna Carta Holy Grail," a brand new album that fans were hearing about for the first time, scheduled for release on the Fourth of July, less than a month after the announcement.

"The Internet is like the wild west," he says at one point during the three-minute spot. "We need to write the new rules."

He is just one of a growing number of major artists this year writing these new rules. In January, David Bowie broke a decade of musical silence with a cryptic video that appeared on YouTube on midnight of his 66th birthday. Then, in March he released "The Next Day," a full-length album that reportedly not even all of the top brass at his publicity company knew about until just days before its arrival. And Kanye West only made fans aware of last week's release, "Yeezus," when he tweeted about it at the beginning of May. What these albums share is secret hard work behind the scenes, with a rushed approach and artwork that appears to just be dashed off the night before. Bowie's album cover is just a white square covering the album jacket for his 1977 album, "Heroes." West's album cover is just a picture of a compact disc with a piece of red duct tape on the case.

"To be able to announce, 'This is now,' I see it as part of music marketing today that is on crack cocaine," says music industry veteran and author of the upcoming book, "The Artist's Guide to Success in the Music Business," Loren Weisman. "Because if you're telling me it's coming in six months, I don't want to hear it."

Steve Knopper, a contributing editor for Rolling Stone, and the author of "Appetite for Self-Destruction: The Spectacular Crash of the Record Industry in the Digital Age," says perhaps the music business has almost come to a place of acceptance with today's consumer culture.

"In the record industry this wasn't really possible before," he says. "Ten or 15 years ago it wasn't possible at all technology-wise, because they couldn't rush out an album that quickly. And then, up until the last few years, nobody wanted to do it even if they could because they were so scared of the Internet. ... 'If we release something too quickly and we don't have the whole thing completely under control then people are going to pirate this!' But now it seems like no one cares. It's like, 'I have an album! Let's just get it out!'"

In the commercial for "Magna Carta Holy Grail," Jay-Z shares his marketing strategy, and it doesn't sound much more complicated than the last clause that Knopper outlined.

"The idea is to really finish the album and drop it," he says, "giving it to the world at one time and letting them share it."

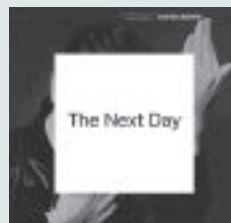

Advanced marketing for superstars

The fans: Your 'absolute best ambassadors'

Mike King, a former product manager at Rykodisc, who teaches music marketing courses at Berklee College of Music, says the sneak attack approach is not just due to the instant gratification of the Internet. It's also the personal nature of social media.

"If you look at the things that labels used to use to market music, like commercial radio and MTV, all of these places that labels used to spend their way into don't exist, but what does exist are these communities of hardcore fans," he says. "If you sneak it out to those people, they will be your absolute best ambassadors."

Time travel at the speed of a 1935 Speedster?

The 1930s brought unprecedented innovation in machine-age technology and materials. Industrial designers from the auto industry translated the principles of aerodynamics and streamlining into everyday objects like radios and toasters. It was also a decade when an unequaled variety of watch cases and movements came into being. In lieu of hands to tell time, one such complication, called a jumping mechanism, utilized numerals on a disc viewed through a window. With its striking resemblance to the dashboard gauges and radio dials of the decade, the jump hour watch was indeed "in tune" with the times!

The Stauer 1930s Dashtronic deftly blends the modern functionality of a 21-jewel automatic movement and 3-ATM water resistance with the distinctive, retro look of

Parquet Courts are in session

Gimme indie rock!

The Brooklyn band "Light Up Gold" with their most recent album.

Parquet Courts are stoners. Make no mistake about that. The Brooklyn-based quartet don't mind that press outlets have focused on this not-so-secret fact, revealed in song titles like "Stoned and Starving," "Donuts Only" and "Yr No Stoner," on the band's excellent "Light Up Gold" album from earlier this year. But what bugs the band is when people throw around the term slacker.

"I think it's kind of a romantic image to conjure up this view of us as these vagabond stoner/slacker dudes just traversing the U.S. and just barely scraping by," says singer and guitarist Andrew Savage. "But the slacker thing re-

Savage acceptance

Coming at it from a different angle

Savage says gaining recognition has been a bit of a double-edged sword, but he's learned to dull down one of those edges.

"As you get more popular, a domino effect starts to happen," he says. "You get people that maybe compare you to bands that you might not be as interested in. When we started getting more press, people started comparing us to stuff like The Strokes, which I didn't agree with, but that doesn't mean that they were wrong. It just means that they're coming from a different musical background than maybe some of the earlier fans or even me."

ally gets on my nerves because it kind of implies that we don't work very hard, when in reality, this is one of the hardest working bands I've ever seen. We work extremely hard, and as prolific as I am, I don't think that the slacker title is appropriate."

"Light Up Gold" showcases that prolific work ethic, as the 15 songs bleed together in an exhilarating punk rush of 35 minutes. Twin trebled guitars sound like woven rays of sun as the rhythm section sounds like a dinosaur rooting through your parents' garage. Savage's words are sometimes silly and often narrative, with a novelist's eye for detail. Parquet Courts jam, but never noodle. This is indie rock the way it used to be.

"People's curiosity has waned, and they stopped kind of digging for stuff like that," says Savage when we bring up the dearth of current bands who draw from the likes of Pavement and Guided by Voices. "But I don't think it stopped. I think it just stopped being presented to people in the way that it was ... and the mainstream top 40 indie, to me it resembles kind of more easy listening and commercial pop music, so it's not coming through the same venues, but it never stopped."

Commander in crazy

Channing Tatum is seen in a rare fully clothed moment in "White House Down." / REINER BAJO Presidential thriller. The other "Die Hard in the White House" movie goes the nutty route.

In "White House Down," the second presidential "Die Hard"-esque jaunt in the last four months, POTUS is James Sawyer, a liberal trying to establish peace in the Middle East. He's a Lincolnian who talks about feeding the hungry and covertly chomps down on Nicorette. He's also played by an Oscar winner (Jamie Foxx). Not since Harrison Ford thwarted Russian hijackers on Clinton's watch in "Air Force One" has a sitting prez been treated so nobly by the movies.

The baddies, who take over the White House, are the president's critics: Militia-men types, far-right talk radio fans, old bigots. (Their ring-leader is 66-year-old James Woods.) But Sawyer's not the hero. As in "Olympus Has Fallen," that role goes to a would-be secret service star, here played by a tank-topped Channing Tatum and named John Cale.

That he shares a name with the Velvet Underground member is not the silliest thing in the film. Things start out in classically clean action movie form, with John Cale, an ex-soldier out to prove his mettle, rescuing Sawyer but still trapped inside the world's most protected house. Around the time of a surreal and protracted car chase around the modest confines of the White House lawn, complete with rocket launchers, logic goes out the window. Say what you will about "Olympus Has Fallen," but it was relatively lean and tried to make sense (kind of). This one, only "Independence Day" director Roland Emmerich's third time messing up the White House, is the crazier, nuttier cousin — the "Armageddon" to its "Deep Impact." It conforms to modern blockbuster language by losing itself to insane, inexplicable spectacle. Given the reckless way they act, our heroes (and screenwriter James Vanderbilt) often seem to forget about all the hostages, including John Cale's young, pernickety daughter (Joey King).

This is dumb cinema writ in the largest letters possible. No one's taking it seriously and everyone (well, maybe not a weary Richard Jenkins, as the Speaker of the House) seems to be having a good time. Tatum may be built out of bricks, but he's become increasingly goofy; note that he was last seen as Danny McBride's gimp in "This Is the End." He's yet another John McClane, but he's no superhero. Even as Tatum gets dirtier and less clothed, he keeps undercutting the stock heroics by tossing off lines and amping up his bumbling behavior. He saves the day and, up to a point, the movie.

The only summer movie starring women

Review

'The Heat'

Director. Paul Feig

Stars. Sandra Bullock,
Melissa McCarthy

Rating. R

Buddy comedy. Sandra Bullock enters the world of competitive improv comedy with "The Heat."

Two years ago, "Bridesmaids" reminded Hollywood that there existed a certain neglected demographic: women. Studios acted fast — or waited ages to hire the man who directed "Bridesmaids" to handle the only major release this summer movie season to star girls. It's almost not worth noting that however affable "Bridesmaids" was, it had problems — chief among them a token gross-out set piece that ended with Maya Rudolph pooping in a street gutter.

"The Heat," which teams Sandra Bullock with Melissa McCarthy, features no such nadir, and the closest it comes to a disgusting, unnecessary showstopper — featuring a Heimlech case gone horribly awry — is rather inspired. It's also more ambitious: It's an action comedy (or, really, a comedy with some action) in which uptight federal agent Bullock and stubborn, swearsy detective McCarthy are forced to go tandem on a convoluted drug case.

Their relationship — with Bullock's character inevitably loosening up, learning to appreciate binge drinking and, ultimately, running roughshod over habeas corpus and other pesky police rules — is mirrored in the casting. Bullock has spent most of her career playing it safe. She's never uglified herself up and rarely strayed from safe rom-com fare. Working in improv represents a challenge. Not only is she working blue, she has to keep up with McCarthy and a stable of old-hat ad-libbers. There is no male lead to lean on; the only romance is the platonic one between her and her female co-star.

She's not the only person trying something new. McCarthy is far more abrasive than elsewhere, and she really pushes toward borderline unlikable behavior. Director Paul Feig — who overcame a career of flops, including the cancelled "Freaks and Geeks," with the left-field "Bridesmaids" smash — isn't exactly a stylist. But he knows how to relax and encourage the best from his cast, while not entirely forgetting about technique. (He shoots in extra-cinematic — and on film, not video.) Spotty at first, "The Heat" only gets better as the cast loosens into their roles and the gags begin to snowball, creating something worth seeing for reasons beyond the stars' gender.

'A historic weekend'

Celebration. A festive atmosphere awaits partygoers at Pride Weekend after the Supreme Court rulings.

Now that the Supreme Court struck down the Defense of Marriage Act, LGBT New Yorkers have even more cause for celebration this weekend at NYC Pride March 2013.

"This is going to be a historic weekend. You're going to see this celebration reach new heights based on what was decided," said Chris Frederick, managing director of Heritage of Pride, which hosts the official Pride events.

Frederick added that this year's theme, Rain to Rainbows, seems especially appropriate.

New Yorker Edie Windsor, the plaintiff in the DOMA case, is one of the grand marshals of the parade, along with Earl Fowlkes, president and CEO of the Center for Black Equity, and singer and activist Harry Belafonte.

Windsor said she was "honored" to be among the marshals.

"If someone had told me 50 years ago that I would be the marshal of New York City Gay Pride Parade in 2013 at the age of 84, I never would have believed it," she said in an email.

The march starts at noon on Sunday. It goes along Fifth Avenue from Midtown to Christopher and Greenwich streets, where 34 years ago police raided The Stonewall Inn, a gay club, causing riots and igniting the modern gay rights movement.

Frederick thinks the Supreme Court decision will bring about 10 to 15 percent more attendees than last year's event — that means he expects around 1.7 million parade-goers.

Organizers expanded this year's festivities to meet with the demand, loading the weekend with 10 official events around the city. Frederick said they also added more exclusive events in order to compete with club promoters and other for-profit venues looking to cash in on the celebration.

Frederick said that the parade will only grow.

"I think we'll get bigger as people become more comfortable with themselves and are able to accept their own sexuality," he said.

27th Annual Dance on the Pier
Sunday, 3 p.m.-10 p.m.
Pier 26, Hudson River (at N. Moore Street)

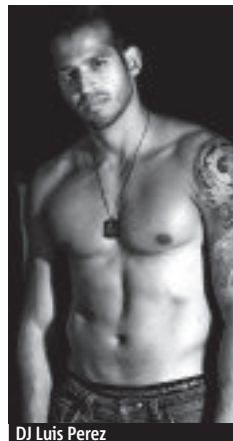

Interview. Rising local gay DJ Luis Perez gears up for Pride's Dance on the Pier

Luis Perez almost exclusively deejays at gay clubs or for gay events — partially because the up-and-coming Hells Kitchen artist is gay himself.

"It's my community; it's the people that I identify with," says Perez, 33. "When I play music, I like to see their reaction."

Perez moved to the city with his longtime boyfriend just a year ago, but he has already developed a following in New York. On Sunday, Perez will play an opening set at NYC Pride's biggest event, the Dance on the Pier, which will be headlined by Cher.

Perez says he's excited to play alongside the likes of Cher and Canadian R&B singer Deborah Cox, also performing. In fact, he recalls listening to a remix of Cox's "Nobody's Supposed to Be Here" — one of the first times he heard a dance remix, now his "go-to."

Still, Perez says he doesn't get starstruck. He also doesn't like to call himself a celebrity, though he's played at big venues around the world, including other U.S. Pride events in Atlanta and San Diego, where he lived before coming to the city for work.

"I just love the energy in New York," Perez said. "The life ... it's just go go go constant."

This is Perez's first time playing at Pride New York. Though he said he's looking forward to the scale of the crowd — 7,500 audience members are expected to show — playing at Pride goes beyond fame.

"It's a celebration of who we are," he says. "That was one of the things that helped me come out: Pride events."

Carlos Areces, Raul Arevalo and Javier Camara strut their stuff in "I'm So Excited!" / SONY PICTURES CLASSICS

You'll have a gay old time

Plane comedy.
The latest from Pedro Almodovar is deceptively light.

"Everything that happens in this film is a fiction or a fantasy," reads a title card at the start of the latest Pedro Almodovar. Traditionally that line is buried at the end of the credits, somewhere between song credits and a copyright year presented in Roman numerals. That it goes at the front of what's been sold as a frothy, absurdly colorful light comedy should send alarm bells, warning viewers that perhaps one shouldn't read this as only a frothy, absurdly colorful light comedy. The Spanish filmmaker's last two films, "Broken Embraces" and "The Skin I Live In," were heavy, dense, sometimes unpleasant works. If he's chilling out, it's on his terms.

It certainly seems fizzy. Set largely aboard a plane headed for Mexico, it's, on the surface, a very modest hang-out movie. Most of the passengers, and all the stewardesses, have been drugged to sleep, but the rest — pilots and stewards, most either queeny or slightly in the closet, plus a few awake passengers — spend the film bantering, drinking mescaline-laced cocktails, swapping stories and worrying that the plane, which is experiencing technical difficulties, won't be able to land.

And that's it. Despite the revved-up title and exclamation point, "I'm So Excited!" is usually closer to being slightly agitated. A dance routine and a mild orgy aside, it's a pleasant film, but deceptively so. Peer just underneath the placid surface, and there's more to it. Rather than a major new work, it's a relaxed self-reflective piece, made by a longtime pro who's getting up in years. Much of the cast is made of regulars, including head steward Javier Camara ("Talk to Her") and moneyed passenger Cecilia Roth ("All About My Mother"). His most famous alumni, Penelope Cruz and Antonio Banderas, are introduced and then swept off around minute three.

In interviews, Almodovar has reflected on how it's his ode to the '70s and '80s, when the thrill of tyrannical dictator Francisco Franco's death was still fresh, and when he was enjoying his first major success. There's a melancholy to the film; it may be named after a Pointer Sisters song in America, but back home the title translates to a more sullen "The Fleeting Lovers" (no exclamation point).

It's a film that laments a bygone era of sudden freedom, now replaced by crumbling democracies and financial disasters. And it's one that finds a major international filmmaker, who often has to hide homosexuality in his films, testing the waters with a new work that, while never explicit, is incredibly, unapologetically and in-your-face queer.

PAUL FEIG

The "Bridesmaids" director laments being the only one making studio films starring women this summer.

NOT A FREAK, SORT OF A GEEK

Paul Feig may have co-created the beloved "Freaks and Geeks" with Judd Apatow. But it wasn't until he directed "Bridesmaids" that something he made himself was a success right off the bat. He started out as an actor (and he still puts in appearances), but gradually slipped behind the camera, where he's directed lots of TV (including "The Office," "30 Rock" and "Arrested Development"). His fourth film, "The Heat," reunites him with Melissa McCarthy, who pairs with Sandra Bullock for the only major movie this summer starring women.

What's it like directing comedy instead of performing it?

I love it, because for me, as an actor, I had my thing that I was good at, but I didn't have the range where I could do everything. Whereas with

You still shoot on film, not video, correct?

Yes. On television, all I work with is HD. But with movies — I'm not a luddite, I just like film. It's very friendly to my actors in a way that HD isn't. There's a quality. I see a difference — I'm sure no one else does. I like grain. With this movie, I wanted it to feel like an old '80s cop movie. We shoot about 12½ minutes per load, and with HD you can roll for an hour straight. I want those built-in breaks. Otherwise I'd get off schedule, and I'd wear out my actors. It keeps everybody on their toes. When film is going through a camera, it's much different than when HD is just lumbering along on this tape.

directing, I get to do that, because it's all about the people I hire. There are projects I have no business doing, but if you get the right people you figure it out. For me, the fun is finding the right people.

But your voice does shine through as a director.

That's what I like about movie directing. With television, which I love doing, you're a bit more of a facilitator. Whereas with movies you are the storyteller. Obviously you have writers and you're nothing without them. But you're the one who says, "This is how it has to be." A cinematographer once told me about a star who directed something, and I asked, "How'd it turn out?" And he said, "Well, they did a good job but they had a bad script, so it didn't work out." As a director you can't fall back on, "Well, I had a bad script." It's your job to make that script not bad.

Paul Feig, who directed "Bridesmaids," also helmed the female-driven "The Heat." / GETTY IMAGES

Did Sandra Bullock have trouble adjusting to this improv style of comedy, which she doesn't usually do?

She's the first to admit she was a little thrown the first couple days, at how loose we play. Then she really snapped into it. When I'm getting these worlds together, I do rehearsals with the actors very early on. I want the actor to fit their character so well that they can just become that character. Then it's not improv, it's just talking like that character.

"Bridesmaids" was supposed to start a rash of studio films starring women. But "The Heat" is one of the very few.

I'm sad there's not more. But my first concern after "Bridesmaids" was there would be an onslaught of movies starring women that weren't really good and were just trying to be outrageous. But what happened is it went the other way: Nothing's happening. It's us, and the indie world is doing this, with "The Bling Ring" and "The To Do List" and "Bachelorette." We're the only movie this summer from a studio with women in the lead role. I don't know what the hang-up is, but I wish they'd get going. I don't want it to be that everybody waits for me to do it.

The skin he lives in

Interview. Pedro Almodovar laments the thrill of the '80s with his latest film, "I'm So Excited!"

Pedro Almodovar is the first to admit that his latest film, "I'm So Excited!" is something of a throwback — and he means it in the best possible way. "I'm conscious that this is almost the opposite movie of 'The Skin I Live In' or 'Broken Embraces' or 'Volver.' It's very much dedicated to the '80s, when I started making movies," he says. The film charts a disastrous discount flight and the myriad characters onboard, each dealing with telenovela-worthy personal baggage that's meant to satirize modern-day Spain. Numerous Almodovar regulars pop up, including (very, very briefly) Penelope Cruz and Antonio Banderas.

So why the return to brightly colored farce and melodrama? "I think I wanted to recover my youth or recover that kind of explosion of freedom that we experienced in Spain and in Madrid after Franco died," he says. "And really for me, at the end of filming, I realized that it was a tribute that I made to that decade — not to my career, but to Spain in the '80s. Spain has changed a lot for the worse, for much worse now. I mean, the whole world has changed. I think I missed that atmosphere."

Up and away

Pedro flies the skies

While "I'm So Excited!" might offer up one of the most melodramatic flights ever, Almodovar's actual experience with airplanes is much more staid. "I have to fly a lot, more than I want, but I'm a very dull passenger," he admits. "I don't speak, I don't have sex, no alcohol and I don't do drugs."

Almodovar sees his time on a plane as a kind of sanctuary. "The thing that I like about flying is that I find it very easy to concentrate," he says. "Many ideas for my movies came from these moments where I'm not anywhere specifically in terms of time and space. You are, like, suspended, and this suits me well."

Jamie-Lynn Sigler sobbed at the funeral of James Gandolfini on Thursday in New York City. / GETTY IMAGES

Stars and strangers alike attend Gandolfini funeral

Jamie-Lynn Sigler, who played Tony's daughter Meadow on "The Sopranos," sobbed in front of the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine in NYC on Thursday morning at the funeral of James Gandolfini.

The New York Times reports that almost the entire cast of "The Sopranos" was there, including Edie Falco, Joe Pantoliano, Dominic Chianese, Steve Schirripa, Aida Turturro, Vincent Curatola and Michael Imperioli. New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie, Hilaria and Alec Baldwin, John Turturro and David Chase were also on hand to say goodbye to the famed actor.

In a somewhat unheard-of move, the public was also allowed to attend. The Times reports that two lines formed before the service: One for those who knew Gandolfini personally and one for those who didn't. One of those waiting in that line was fan Gwen Gibbs, who drove from Kentucky to give her respects. "I am not sure how to put it in words," she says. "He made the character of Tony Soprano feel like a real person, like someone you knew. When I heard he had died, I hoped it was a hoax."

Messing on sneezing and summer

Now that "Smash" is over, Debra Messing is doing what everyone does when they lose their job — become a paid celebrity spokesperson. In this case, it's for Zyrtec.

"When I became an actress, allergies became a real problem because it would affect my ability to work," she said, in the interview we got through the pharmaceutical company (welcome to the world of celebrity interviewing!). "I can [now] do the recreational things I want as well as work outside."

So what is she planning? "Spending some lazy time with my son [Roman]," she said. "He's worked really hard in school and I've worked really hard on 'Smash,' so just being able to spend quality time together is what I want."

Kat Von D and Deadmau5 are over

What starts on Twitter for Kat Von D and DJ Deadmau5.

The celebrity duo became engaged over the social networking site six months ago. Deadmau5 tweeted a picture of a black diamond engagement ring adorned with skulls, writing, "I can't wait for Christmas so ... Katherine Von Drachenberg, will you marry me?" Von D accepted.

Six months later, they are kaput.

"Man, I'm a fool," Von D wrote on Twitter Wednesday night. "Cheating on your loved one is the most hurtful thing one could do. I hate to have to admit, that this relationship is indeed over."

Deadmau5, whose real name is Joel Zimmerman, decided to then take the conversation off of Twitter and on to a more personal space — Facebook. He had "relations with another woman" during a break the couple took.

"Following that, Kat and I reconciled, and I acknowledged being intimate with another person while we were estranged," he continued. "We did move past those issues, and I proposed to Kat in mid-December. At the end of June, it was clear that the relationship was not working, and we mutually ended the engagement. I was not, at any point, unfaithful to Kat during our time together."

Catch 'Tom Durnin' before it disappears

Theater. The title character of this play offers a master class on how to manipulate.

Like father, like son? That's a viable take-away from "The Unavoidable Disappearance of Tom Durnin" at the Laura Pels Theatre — at least at first blush. After all, both titular Tom (David Morse) and his son James (Christopher Denham) churn out lies like modern-day Don Drapers.

But Tom's falsehoods are calculated for personal gain. Five years ago, he artificially propped up a worthless company he represented by getting friends and family to invest in it, causing them to lose everything. Now, fresh out of jail, he black-mails his son-in-law (Rich Sommer) with seeming fabrications to gain information and influence. Son James' mendacity is more benign. He just wants to avoid embarrassment and confrontation, so he's less than candid with his fledgling girlfriend (Sarah Goldberg) and his mother (Lisa Emery) about Tom's whereabouts and health. They're still lies, of course, but he's not really hurting anyone.

Playwright Steven Levenson takes his time distinguishing the Durnin men, and that's part of the beauty of the piece. At first, Tom seems like the victim. The poor guy just got out of jail, and his family shuns him. James takes him in, but barely talks to him. But little by little, we see Tom for the master manipulator he is. And we see that while James spent no actual hard time in the slammer, he's been in a prison of his own for the last few years.

The set (Beowulf Boritt), direction (Scott Ellis) and cast all have an unassuming quality, allowing the power of the piece to creep up on you. And "creep" is perfectly fitting for Tom, though Morse skillfully peels back layers in this role to reveal the reasons why.

A round or three with Alie and Georgia

Cocktails. The hilarious duo shares tips for hosting a summer soiree.

Best friends Alie Ward and Georgia Hardstark wear vintage dresses and mix mean cocktails. They also play off each other's jokes without batting a lash — the two became Internet sensations for their hilarious video on concocting a McNuggetini, a joke cocktail complete with McNugget garnish. Now they're taking their irreverent act on the road with a new travel and food show, "Tripping Out with Alie & Georgia," on the Cooking Channel. "The show is about going on road trips with your best friend and really experiencing things together and being very goofy and honest," says Ward. They then bring those adventures back home to share with friends at house parties. "Friends are like having chosen family — so it's about how to celebrate, but still do it in a way that's relaxed and fun." We get their tips on making our shindigs half as exciting as theirs.

Summer sips

Alie: I've been an advocate for wine spritzers for years. Wine coolers are a totally different thing. A wine spritzer, which is a nice dry white wine mixed with sparkling water and maybe a little fruit is such a good summer sipping cocktail. You'll stay hydrated, it's not too sweet. And if you're not much of a beer drinker, it's perfect.

Georgia: I'm totally a beer drinker and at first I was like, "No way, that's such a girly drink." But now I love them. Another great one is soda water over ice with a couple dashes of bitters. It's great for your designated drivers.

Tip

Creating your own cocktail

Georgia: It's so much easier than it sounds. It really comes down to making a play on something. So if there's a cocktail that you enjoy, try a different flavor of bitters in it instead of coming up with something crazy. Start with something you do like, and then be a little more creative. And a really fun, punny name always helps, too.

hood, it gives people something to talk about. It's not just going to be a group showing up and chatting to the best of their abilities.

Georgia: I totally agree. When there's a theme — we're doing a daytime pancake party — it makes it more focused. People know if they're going to bring sides it has to tie into that. But we're definitely not stuffy when it comes to themes. Parties are an excuse to have fun so you don't want to stress anyone out.

Make a batch

Alie: Being able to make a big batch of something is really helpful. And it's fun to just have one kind of signature cocktail for your event. That way everyone can try the rum punch and can have that to talk about.

Who Decides What is Right and Wrong??

"Not everyone who says to Me, 'Lord, Lord,' shall enter the kingdom of heaven, but he who does the will of My Father in Heaven..."

Matthew 7:21

Moral issues are debated in social, religious and political settings. Who decides what is right and wrong? The president, the church, the majority, the individual? None of the above -- if God exists, has spoken and holds people accountable. If you want to know what is right, don't ask for my opinion, look in the word of God. Let's study the word together!

Horoscope

Cancer | June 21-July 22.
If you don't expect too much from a social connection, you won't be disappointed. You should still be friendly with everyone you meet.

Leo | July 23-Aug. 22.
It's best not to make any last-minute changes to an important matter. Things are likely to work out as you anticipate.

Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22.
Your best adviser might not be someone to whom you usually go for counsel. Before seeking advice from others, try a close friend.

Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22.
In a matter that directly affects your work, don't underestimate your competition. This does not mean that all your adversaries are stronger.

Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21.
A wise associate might influence you to change your mind. Don't berate yourself for doing so.

Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21.
A pleasant surprise is in store when new life is breathed into an endeavor you were about to write off.

Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20.
Take advantage of an opportunity to catch up with an acquaintance whom you've been neglecting of late.

Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18.
Follow your judgment regarding an important career decision. Advice from others could only muddy the waters.

Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20.
There is a strong possibility that you will learn a valuable lesson. The knowledge you'll gain will be used later.

Aries | March 21-April 20.
Both your perceptions and your logic are sharper than usual. Both will help you make decisions.

Taurus | April 21-May 21.
Even if you aren't an original thinker, chances are someone you hang out with is. You'll know how to put her ideas to good use.

Gemini | May 22-June 20.
Anything that calls for a financial risk might not work out. However, involvements requiring hard work will pay off reliably. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Metro's left side gets a workout

Yesterday, Metro underscored the existence of liberal bias in journalism. A page devoted only to celebrities who feel a certain way was the most blatant. But all of the articles went beyond reporting the news of the Supreme Court striking down the Defense of Marriage Act and into offering opinions. As a supporter of civil unions and equal rights for gays under the law, I feel that the sacrament of matrimony is between one man and one woman. Metro [on June 27] tried to equate that opinion with supporting segregation. No, these are two completely different issues. KEVIN METZ, VIA EMAIL

Keep DOMA in perspective

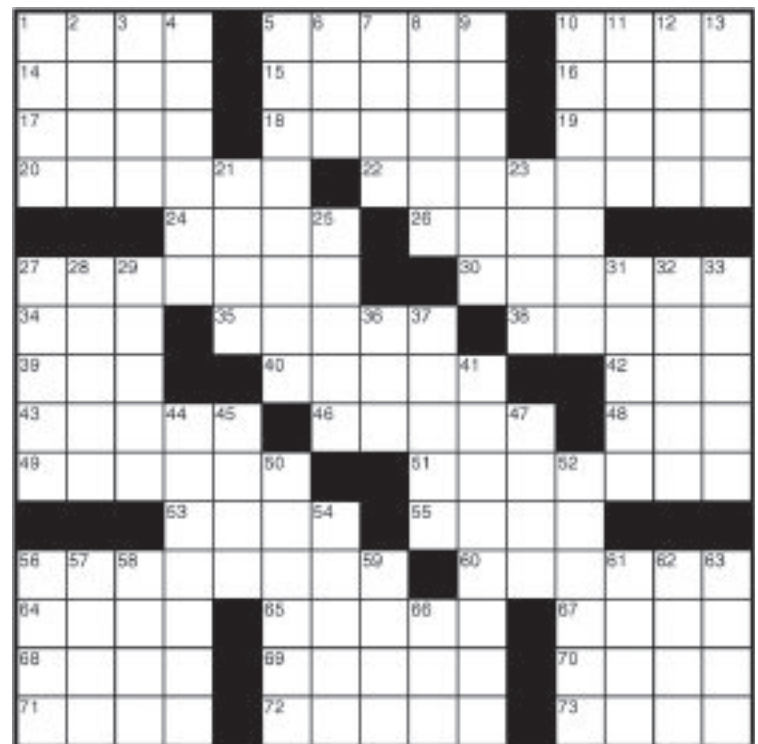

Some perspective on the recent Supreme Court rulings may be helpful. DOMA being struck down doesn't mean religious institutions now have to conduct same-sex marriages, merely that they will be recognized by the law as equal to any other between two people. And the court did not strike down Proposition 8, but simply ruled that the defendants lacked legal standing to sue; Prop 8 was already repealed by the voters. JOSEPH CONNELL, VIA EMAIL

Report: Nets pursuing Pierce, Garnett

The Nets and Celtics were discussing a blockbuster trade on draft day Thursday, according to Yahoo Sports, as Brooklyn inquired about the availability of landing Kevin Garnett and Paul Pierce.

According to the report, the Celtics would likely receive a combination of players and picks in exchange for the two future Hall of Famers. Gerald Wallace, Kris Humphries, Tomike Shengelia and possibly three first round picks were the names and amount of draft picks being discussed Thursday afternoon.

Garnett would have to waive his no-trade clause for a deal to take place.

Jeter inches closer toward comeback

Yankees shortstop Derek Jeter began a running program Thursday at Steinbrenner Field in Tampa, Fla., calling it the "last step" before beginning a minor league rehab stint, according to ESPN.

"Everything is good," Jeter told ESPN. "No problems whatsoever. It's a constant progression."

The Yankees have not yet set a date for his possible return. METRO

Who is the next big thing in the NHL?

NHL Draft. The Rangers' Gordie Clark talks with Metro about this weekend's player draft.

Colorado Avalanche Executive Vice President of Hockey Operations Joe Sakic's announcement that the team will not use the top overall pick on Portland Winterhawks defenseman Seth Jones in Sunday's NHL Entry Draft sent shock waves throughout the hockey world.

Yet the bold decision has a supporter in the person of New York Rangers Director of Player Personnel Gordie Clark.

"In the scouting world, those teams picking in those areas, they all expect to draft a player that can contribute to their team in a strong way. If they all do that, it's a win-win-win. There's going to be three winners in this [draft]," Clark told Metro New York in a phone interview.

"Jones has to be a top one or two defenseman on your hockey team. The forwards have to be top line players. All three of those guys are that."

Jones, Halifax Mooseheads left wing Jonathan Drouin and center Nathan MacKinnon were the presumed top three picks until Sakic told the Denver Post Tuesday night the organization was going to pass on Jones.

"If somebody thinks a left-winger like Drouin can help them or that they need that more right now, more than the 'D' or the center, I have no problem with them taking a Dr-ouin," Clark said. "These are all top-level players at their positions. So it can come down to that as far as what you need."

One player that Clark is high on is Max Domi. The son of former NHLer Tie Domi, the center recorded 87 points [39 goals and 48 assists] in 64 games with the Ontario Hockey League's London Knights.

"He's a top-end playmaker," Clark said. "He sometimes passes so much [that] he forgets to shoot it, because he can score, too. His vision is in the up level of the players in the draft."

Yanked around

A-Rod not wanted?

Alex Rodriguez is paranoid that the Yankees don't want him to return to the team this season or possibly ever, according to ESPN. The report says that A-Rod thinks the Yankees are purposely slowing his return to the active roster so that they can declare him "medically unfit" to play this season.

If that were the case, the club could recoup 80 percent of his salary through insurance, according to the report.
